United Kingdom

http://www.kyrkor.be/Application_FOI_data-protection_West-Mercia-Police_UK_180220_redacted.pdf

In possibly the world's second most government-surveilled nation, United Kingdom, the rather Orwellian UK Police acknowledged the following statements:

1. "Information about or supplied by a third party may have been excluded, summarised, or obscured in accordance with the rights of the third party."
2. "This data controller also processes personal data which is exempt from notification."

The Police in United Kingdom have here beneath indicated, through their absolute exclusion of the evidenced complaints to British Police with (false) information regarding innocent Torsten, that while British Police defend British church clergy and protect all the British church clergys' fabrications of lies, the victims of these typical British church clergy abuses have no rights to access or defend against the (false) information, in reality.

[Public ignorance is strength. Good is bad.]
